Newton Phillips.

has since lived.

In the town of Killingly Mr. Phillips has always been recognized as a real leader of the democratic party and with the democracy his fortunes have always been cast. Here he has been honored with election to the board of selectmen and other town offices, and given the united party nomination for representative. Outside of Killingly his abilities were also taken advantage of by his party and he was for many years a member of the democratic state central committee and often a participant in the consultations of the state leaders.

As a young man Mr. Phillips saw leaders.

As a young man Mr. Phillips saw service in the Civil war, serving a year and a half as a member of the Sixty-second Massachusetts volunteers, and was with General Butler at New Orleans. Soon after the close of the war, on March 28, 1866, Mr. Phillips was married at Greenfield, Mass., to Miss Mary Eliza Chase of Bernardson, who survives. The children are Mrs. Alice M. Drabble of Auburn, N. Y., William K. of Yuma, Ariz, Walter N. of New London and Miss Maude A. Phillips of Hartford. There are also four grand-children, Newton and Helen Phillips and Gladys and Ruth Drabble.

EUGENE S. NASH

Reminded That Thursday Was 48th Anniversary of His Marching Away

"It was forty-eight years ago this morning," said Eugene S. Nash, Thursday, "that I left New Haven for Ship Island, Miss., to join General Eutler's expedition against New Orleans." And those who heard him say it were immediately interested, felt their memories click and try to run back nearly half a century—felt that they were trying to appreciate that this still strong, vigorous, active man, with his years resting lightly upon him, was bravely fighting under the flag for the preservation of the Union, while they were still among the unborn; for Mr. Nash is still a youthful looking veteral, and it was hard to realize that he was greaking of events upon which was speaking of events upon which interest of a nation hung well more than two score years.

Mr. Nash left New Haven as a member of Company F. Thirteenth Connecticut Volunteers, His record in the service was one of unbroken activity. Never a day in the hospital, never disabled by wounds, though he was in the thick of many a hard fight; he was favored with the health, strength and good fortune to enable him to give freely of the best that was in him for his country and the cause. Hard marches had few terrors for him, and through mud and dust in heart-breaking rapid changes throughout the compaign he was always on his feet at the finish. All the thrills in Mr. Nash's life story are not associated with his life in the army. As a boy of 12 he left his home in Norwich and made his way around the Horn to the California coast, impelled by an inherent spirit of bravery and adventure to cast his boyish fortunes into the very heart and center of the gold-alluring vortex that might give him fame and fortune. Yet many years from manhood, this was the degree of his fortifude. He passed in a few years from the tumultuous camps of the gold states to the perllous life of the high seas, sailing as a follower of the hazardous occupation of the whalerman, and many a good story he can tell when the mood is upon him of his experiences in the ice choked waters of the southern polar seas or in the open water in other quarters of the golde. Through dangers sufficient to hold death for a regiment, Mr. Nash open water in other quarters of the globe. Through dangers sufficient to hold death for a regiment, Mr. Nash came unscathed. In his later years Mr. Nash as a keeper of the light at Lattimer's reef, below New London, was still beside the sea that held such an attraction for him. The review of his life also holds the record of his enlistment in various industrial occupations as a fisherman off Watch Hill, as station master at Danielson for the railroad, as restaurant keeper, and in as station master at Danfelson for the railroad, as restaurant keeper, and in other enterprises, Such is a brief outline of a life few are privileged to live. In detail it is supremely fascinating. Still young in mind and spirit, still closely in touch with the world and the doings upon it, Mr. Nash looks back forty-eight years—fifty-eight—years and admits that he would like to try it all over again, for it was worth while.

After lingering at the point of death since Monday night, when he suffered a paralytic shock, Newton Phillips, one of the most widely known citizens in the town of Killingly, died at his home near Alexander's lake Thursday night shortly before 8 o'clock. Mr. Phillips' severe illness had been of just one week's duration, and hope for his recovery was practically crushed out after the critical development of Monday. Mr. Phillips, who passed his 67th birthday on Jan. 27, was born in Gill, Mass. In early life he learned the carpenter's trade and followed it for many years, developing into an unusually Major A. D. D. A. CLASS Gives Farewell St. Patrick's Party for Miss Alice Tucker.

The second annual banquet of the D. A. class of the Second Congregational Sunday school was held in the banquet hall of the church Wednesday evening and was attended by twelve members of the class. The banquet was given as a farewell party to Miss Alice Tucker, a member of the class, who is soon to leave this city for Rapid City, N. D., where she will reside. Green was the color scheme of this St. Patrick's party. The table was most attractive with a mound of Irish potatoes as a centerpiece with small green flags. Green ribbons attached to the shamrock place cards ended in this mound. The menu follows: Fruit cocktail, tomato soup, sabnon salad, sandwiches, banana split, cake, confections, chocolate. At the conclusion of the last course each young lady pulled the ribbon attached to her place card and found characteristic keynotes which were read, much to the amusement of all. Miss Tucker, the guest of honor, was surprised to find attached to her ribbon a friendship ring as her gift. St. Patrick games were played the remainder of the evening. Miss Mary ribbon a friendship ring as her girt.
